The UGFA welcomes our newest members - Clinical Faculty at the Animal Health Laboratory (AHL) and the Veterinary Teaching Hospital (VTH). This group of approximately 20 veterinarians provides diagnostic and clinical services to referring veterinarians and the VTH, they teach and many have research programs.

AHL veterinarians joined the University of Guelph in 1997 as part of the enhanced partnership of the University with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs (OMAFRA). The AHL is situated within the OVC and shares space with the Department of Pathobiology. AHL veterinarians provide laboratory diagnostic services to the province, country and internationally. This group includes anatomic and clinical pathologists, virologists, a molecular biologist and a bacteriologist. Internationally, they are recognized for their expertise in animal diseases important to the animal industries of Ontario, as well as pathogens that can be transmitted people. Together they are responsible for monitoring programs for Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (Mad Cow Disease), Avian Influenza, West Nile Virus and a myriad of other pathogens. They are active in experiential learning of undergraduates, working closely with OVC pathologists and microbiologists. They are members of graduate student committees and have long been classified as adjunct or graduate faculty.
